FORWORD

In early June 2016, I was approached by Francesco Diodovich from Conservatory of Bari, Puglia, in southern Italy to write a Cello-guitar sonata.

Immediately, I imagined I should write something about olive trees. I have always regretted the primitive harvest technique of some villagers who hit with sticks and even throw stones to collect fruits from the trees. It facilitates to collect the fruit but hurts the trees also. My piece is based on this dilemma.

My piece is composed of four movements:

1. movement: the sea of olive trees,
2. movement: an Aegean folk song,
3. movement: the cruel harvest,
4. movement: the sea of trees after the harvest.

It is 2016, the 21st century and still the humanity tries to solve its conflicts using brute force. Inevitably, United Nations puts its servants, ladies and gentlemen, into the harms way. Many a mother stands still at the head of her beloved.

This piece is initially inspired as a cello-guitar sonata by Francesco Diodovich and Giovanna Buccarella and it is dedicated to them to perform.

But this piece is also dedicated to lives lost in United Nations missions whose agony inspired its tunes con tristezza.

INTRODUCTION

The Broken Olive Branch is a Sonata for Violoncello and Classical Guitar. It is approx. 15 minutes long.

It is inspired by the cruel harvest techniques of some villagers.

It is composed of four movements. The titles of them are:

1. The Sea of Olive Trees.
2. Aegean folk song
3. Cruel Harvest
4. Olive trees sea after the harvest

The piece is composed by Ali Riza SARAL in June-July 2016 on the request of Francesco Diodovich from Conservatory of Bari, Puglia, in southern Italy.

This is a strongly symbolic work, beginning with the sudden shouting of the August insects (Cicadidae) to the half cadenza ending of the piece with the abstract question of 'Why?'.

ANALYSIS

The Broken Olive Branch is a Sonata for Violoncello and Classical Guitar. It is composed of 4 movements.

1. The Sea of Olive Trees.
2. Aegean folk song
3. Cruel Harvest
4. Olive trees sea after the harvest

The first movement is almost a Sonata Allegro. The tonalities seem to be e minor for A and B minor for B but they are not very clearly declared. There is a surprise B major coda similar to August insects suddenly beginning to sing in the olive tree fields. The development introduces a folk song like dance tune as a surprise. Development is done at each step similar to folk dances where each individual dancer takes its turn and displays its skills. Returning transition is the surprising August insects again. A recaps as a surprise. B recaps from e minor and final coda is the sudden silence of August insects.

The second movement is written similar to an Aegean folk song which displays 'bravura' of the dancer. It has an A B A song form.

The third movement has a RONDO like form A B A C A B A. It reflects the struggle of villagers in the harvest.

The last movement is almost like a fugue. It applies the basic principles of a fugue, like stretto, answering subject, accompany etc. It sounds like tonal but it lacks a strong tonal center except the few notes at the beginning. It ends with the tonal center of the first measure but this measure is a dominant 9th chord so it ends with a question.
